

KENTUCKY DAY AT EXPOSITION.

Press Bureau, World's Fair, St. Louis, June 15.—Kentucky's day of glory at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition dawned and drew almost to a close without a cloud to mar its serenity. Late in the afternoon a heavy rain fell, but it did not break into the day materially. Every one was from Kentucky, and the 1,500 badges which the Committee on Arrangements provided were supplemented by 5,000 others struck off in a St. Louis printing shop. Argued by more than three times their original number, the badges were soon exhausted, and the Commonwealth's proud name quivered over a host of hearts inspired by patriotism and sentiments closely akin. The red letters were conspicuous in every part of the fair grounds. On the Pike they were seen seeking the dare-devil attractions, but refusing to pass the most commonplace. In the Palace of Liberal Arts, the Administration building and, most of all, in the Kentucky building, the crowd was marked with the symbol that stands for cordiality, hospitality and good-fellowship in all parts of the world. Louisville's delegation, accompanied by crowds from Richmond, Frankfort, Lancaster, Shelbyville, Cloverport, Henderson and Owensboro, increased the Kentuckians already in St. Louis by nearly 500 persons. The Henderson route's special train poured over 300 out at the gates, while the Southern and the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern brought heavy trains to this city.

Review of Troops.

Gov. and Mrs. Beckham, Miss Hattie Bell Fuqua, Miss Meme Smith, President A. Y. Ford, of the Kentucky Commission, and Mrs. Ford, Judge S. W. Hager, Mr. and Mrs. Ely H. Brown, Charles F. Grainger, Mayor of Louisville; Gen. Percy Haly, commanding the Governor's staff, and Garret Wall were received in the Administration building by the Hon. David R. Francis, president of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Accompanied by Harry B. Hawes, president of the St. Louis Kentucky Society, the party went to the Kentucky building.

Gov. Beckham and President Francis mounted the balustrade at the south entrance, and reviewed a body of troops which is maintained at the Exposition. The troops were the Jefferson Guards, which are under command of Gen. Edmund Rice, master of ceremonies; the Philippine scouts, a battalion of United States marines, headed by the First cavalry band; the Philippine constabulary, the Frazier Guards, of Memphis, and cadets from Simpson College, Iowa, and from Iowa State College. Gen. John C. Bates, who was first in command of the West Point maneuvers last October, paid his respect to the Kentucky delegation during the ceremonies at the Kentucky building. Lieut. J. Sidney Haight, who was at West Point, contrived much to the smoothness of the military review. The Filipinos are excellently drilled, and form a part of the United States army.

President Francis' Welcome.

The Exposition hand thrilled the crowd with Southern airs of martial and pastoral measure, as Gov. Beckham, President Francis, Mr. Ford, Harry B. Hawes, and the three flag-bearers advanced to the low platform that had been erected. Mr. Ford introduced President Francis, saying that he wished to welcome every one to the little spot of Kentucky which had been transplanted to Missouri, and that in Mr. Francis the audience would see a native son of the old Commonwealth, who could much more ably bid anniversary welcome to the new Kentucky home. Mr. Ford called attention to the fact that even the element seemed to favor Kentucky, as it had rained on Missouri day and on Indiana day, but today "the sun shone bright in the new Kentucky home." The rain later today did not dampen the bright cheer in the Kentucky building. The building, which had been comfortably filled at the beginning, was packed almost to suffocation when Mr. Francis arose. He told his hearers of his love for old Kentucky, his native State, and followed with a statement of the manner in which Western energy had eclipsed all former efforts at producing a World's Fair and what part Kentucky had played in the Louisiana Purchase and in the Exposition from the first until today.

Gov. Beckham's Response.

In an able and long speech Gov. Beckham responded to President Francis. He said, in part:— "The people of Kentucky, whose representative I am upon this happy occasion, direct me to congratulate you and those associated with you upon the progress of this great exposition and to wish for it continued success and prosperity. We consider it the most complete and elaborate gathering of the world's products and of the marvelous accomplishments of the age even before brought together. It is a magnificent and enduring monument to the genius and enterprise of the people of your city and State; its beauty and its splendor command the admiration of the people of every nation; it is a source of pride and pleasure to the citizens of this Republic, because we here demonstrate and prove to the world what we have long been conscious of ourselves, that this is the greatest nation on earth, that in business and commerce we excel all others, that our advancement in the arts and sciences has never been equaled in the world's history and that to-day we can say truthfully and without unwarranted boastfulness that we lead other countries in civilization and in all those things that go to make human life better, safer and happier.

As we stand here surrounded with the miraculous achievements of your undertaking we are profoundly impressed with the signal victory of American genius which this event typifies. With only a hundred years behind you, from the time when savages of an alien race were in the useless possession of this territory, down to the present era you have built faster and better than ever did people before and now you have reared in a night, as it were, this matchless carnival city, which seems to be almost the culmination of man's attainment and triumph. Countries whose civilization dates back for thousands of years cannot equal this. You deserve great credit for the launch of this gigantic exhibition.

Looking over this magnificent exposition—exhibiting, as it does, side by side, the trade, the art and the home life of the people of all civilized countries—looking over this interesting and inspiring scene—is not your mind so elevated as to enable you to see how we are closely related to all mankind—how we cannot escape the privileges and the duties of a co-partner in the civilization of this day? By modern inventions and the co-ordination of human affairs we are close to all the world, a sharer in all their gains and misfortunes, in their thoughts and feelings, affecting them and being affected in turn by them for better or worse. What a sad, inglorious waste of money this exposition must be, if it does not teach us much, if it does not humble our vanity while enlarging our vision and swelling our hearts with a greater respect and sympathy for all mankind and a deeper reverence for Almighty God! We shall be blind if we do not see that a nation, in this day, should not spend all its efforts in gaining wealth and power, and that true happiness and glory can be won for its people by other means than by the sword and gun.

Informal Sight Seeing.

The afternoon was spent in informal sight-seeing, and the members of the Board of Trade, the Commercial Club and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association were prominently in evidence.

Again at night the new Kentucky Home was the center of all lovers of the Bluegrass State and many persons from other parts of the country, who were fortunate enough to secure cards.

The Iconoclasts.

Iconoclasts were image breakers. The controversy respecting images, which had been introduced into churches for popular instruction about A. D. 300, was begun about A. D. 726 and occasioned much disturbance and loss of life in the eastern empire. Leo Isauricus published two edicts for demolishing images in churches in that year and enforced them with great vigor in 736. The controversy was carried on in the church, and the schism was the occasion of the second council of Nice, A. D. 787. The iconoclasts were finally excommunicated at the eighth general council held later at Constantinople, and this controversy led to the separation of the Greek and Latin churches. Many images were destroyed in England and Scotland during the reformation and in the civil war—1641-48—and on each occasion the destroyers assumed the name of iconoclasts.

Belief in Rat Charms.

It is a curious fact that as late as the middle of the nineteenth century there existed—indeed there may still exist—among the good people of Cavan and Tyrone a belief that rats may be charmed away by rhymes and other magical means. One of my acquaintances was told by an Irishman of a case of "billeting" rats—that is, of clearing them out of one place and lodging them in another. No pipe was played. Indeed the method was a mystery, but the rats came flocking out of mill and granary an hour before midnight and moved away in a compact mass to their newly appointed lodgings. It was a brilliant moonlight night, and scores of people besides the narrator followed them as they trooped down the roads and through a sleeping village to their destination.—Sunday Magazine.

Fire Under Water.

Fire under water may be produced by placing some small pieces of phosphorus in a conical shaped tumbler and then covering them with the crystals of chlorate of potash. Next fill the glass with water and then add a few drops of sulphuric acid, the acid to be applied directly to the phosphorus and potash crystals by means of a long tube. If the experiment is properly carried out tongues of bright red flame can be seen flashing up through the water, the intense chemical heat produced by the action of the sulphuric acid on the potash and phosphorus being sufficient to inflame the latter, although entirely covered with water.

A Great Difference.

At a dinner given by Governor J. K. Vardaman of Mississippi the subject of toasts came up.

"A very good toast," said Governor Vardaman, "and one that comes home forcibly to all men in office, was once proposed by the learned Ashley Stockton of Montpelier. The occasion was a farewell banquet to the governor of Vermont, whose term of office was expiring.

"Here," said Ashley Stockton at this banquet, 'is the health of all governors. They come in with a great deal of opposition, but they go out with none at all.'"

DEVOTED WAGTAILS.

These Birds Mate For Life and Are Extremely Affectionate.

The wagtail frequently migrates from one part of the country to another and sometimes congregates in flocks, but he pairs for life, and the same pair always reappear, sometimes when they are least expected and all the more welcome from their occasional absence, on their favorite lawn. Their devotion to one another is extreme, as a scene I witnessed some forty years ago, but which is as fresh in my memory as if I had seen it yesterday, will show.

A wagtail had been killed, probably by a stone, and was lying dead in the middle of the circular drive in front of the Down House, Blandford. The survivor seemed beside himself with grief. Like Eve in "Paradise," he "knew not what death was," or, at most, the reality was only gradually breaking in upon him. He kept running up to the body with loud and plaintive call notes. He called, but there was no response. He caressed the body, caught hold of it with his little bill, coaxed it to move and drew it after him for a yard or two. He even tried to rise with it in the air. Then, like one distraught, he dashed away to the edge of the grave drive and then as quickly dashed back again, to go through the same mournful process. Sometimes he would fly right off in wavering, uncertain flight as far as the eye could follow him, as though he could bear the sight no longer, but without stopping to rest he hurried back in straighter and quicker flight, unable to tear himself away or as if he hoped that something might have happened in his absence. This long drawn tragedy, this abandonment of grief, I watched from the window throughout the afternoon till darkness came on. Next morning the body had disappeared, and I saw the survivor no more.—R. Bosworth Smith in Nineteenth Century.

Worst of All Experiences.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last. Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H. Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years" she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by Short & Haynes, druggists.

Rousseau's Affection.

Rousseau lived long on his fifth floor in Paris, forgotten by the world which he affected to despise and from affection really shunned, when an accident happened to him in one of his solitary walks. He was met in a narrow part of the street by M. de Fargueau, driving very fast in his carriage, and in his attempt to get out of the way was pushed down by a large Danish dog running before the horses. M. de Fargueau immediately stopped his coach and hastened to assist the person whom his dog had thus knocked down, but when he saw it was the author of "Emilius" he renewed his apologies and attentions.

The next day he sent to ask after Rousseau.

"Tell your master to chain up his dog," was the only answer.

A Bishop's Comment.

Bishop W. A. Candler was once advocating a more liberal loosening of the purse strings and told his audience that several years before he sent an article to a paper, in which he said, "We pray too loud and work too little." The compositor, consciously or unconsciously, perpetrated a little joke, for when the article appeared it read, "We pray too loud and work too little." "I let it go at that," said the bishop. "The fact is, I believe the printer was right, and I never ventured to correct him."

Benefits Reversed.

French and German had proved too hard, but Algernon took up the study of Italian with high hopes.

"How are you and your Italian teacher getting on?" asked one of Algernon's friends when the study had proceeded for three months.

"Aw—aw. I'm just about where I was," said Algernon ambiguously, "but my teacher, d'you know, he's speaking English much better than he was when we began."
